

DAY 1: Anchoring Your Baseline & Radical Predictability

Companion Action Plan to The Instinctive Trust Skill · Chapter 1, 2 & Step 1

CORE LAW: Confidence is not a loud performance; it is radical predictability. When your physical baseline is calm and devoid of erratic micro-movements, other nervous systems instantly register you as safe and capable.

THE PRINCIPLE IN PRACTICE

When people meet you, their primal threat-detection system scans you in milliseconds. Sudden head tilts, jerky pacing, and darting eyes signal unpredictability. Today, your sole objective is to strip away involuntary erratic noise so your presence becomes clear, calm, and grounded.

DAILY ACTION PROTOCOLS (CHECK OFF AS COMPLETED)

- ☐ The 3-Second Threshold Pause: Before crossing any doorway (office, meeting room, client lobby, or home), stop completely for 3 seconds. Take one steady breath, relax your shoulders down, and step in with measured pacing.
- ☐ Eliminate the Erratic Eyeline: When speaking or listening, resist the impulse to dart your eyes to the floor or phone when searching for words. Hold a calm triangle focus (between the eyes and forehead), or look gently away at horizontal level.
- ☐ Pacing Decelerator Drill: Consciously slow your walking speed by 15% during transit between tasks. Move with intent. Observe how an unhurried tempo changes the way people part and acknowledge you.
- ☐ Stillness in Inaction: When waiting in an elevator, line, or sitting in a meeting lobby, do NOT pull out your phone immediately. Stand or sit with quiet, balanced stillness for 2 uninterrupted minutes.

FIELD DEBRIEF & INTROSPECTION WORKSHEET

Complete these questions at the end of Day 1 to solidify behavioral gains:

| Reflection Field / Checkpoint                                                                                                                | My Field Observations & Honest Notes |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------|
| Doorway TransitionsDid I pause before entering high-stakes or common rooms? What internal urge did I feel?                        |                                      |
| Physical Stillness vs. UrgencyWhere did I catch myself moving too quickly or fidgeting? How did pausing change my internal state? |                                      |
| Others' ReactionDid people seem more relaxed or attentive when I maintained a steady, predictable baseline?                       |                                      |